Two objects are to be attained by this arrangement First, more efficient and economi-

The other way open to enable the Western Union to make such improvements and introduce such new ervices as it proposes to do, would he to lay new cables. This would seem to be the height of folly. Duplication of the existing trans-Atlantic cable facilities at a cost of many millions, when there are more than ample facilities for all business, would put an unnecessary financial burden upon an already fully hurdened business and would probably postpone the reduction of rates or introduction of new services.

and Idle Facilities As at present carried on, the trans-Atlantic cable business is practically all flash service, i. c. instantaneous. Owing to the difference in time, there are only a few business hours of the day common to both sides and during these hours at least 75% of the cable business is done. This is demonstrated by the accompanying chart.

Efficient Service Requires Sufficient Facilities

To meet these requirements it is essential not only that there be at all times sufficient cable facilities, under one control, but that they should be operated interchangeably with each other and in close physical connection with land lines as one system. Ample spare facilities are necessary to provide against the very frequent cable interruptions.

As it is, each company operates its own cables through separate and distinct offices and under separate and distinct management. All interchange of business is by actual transfer of the uniness from one company to the other, with the consequent delay and nterruption of a service in which seconds are valuable.

So soon as the proposed arrange-ment goes into effect, the Western Union purposes, with the consent of the British Post Office Department, to introduce at least two new features or services in addition to the proposed DAILY CABLE LETTER

Through this control all the various properties are operated as one system advantage in service over what could be given by these same companies if operated separately.
